

ASIO

(under construction)

When you hear THE Experts' calls to turn up the Secret Surveillance dial on Conspiracy Theorists, it's worth bearing in mind:

This is the exact same Secret-Security-MyGov that has a long history of being penetrated by CCP Influencers.

In 2013 an event took place which originally i thought was a racist joke - against Aussies - playing on our dumbfuck stereotype ...

Did you hear the one about the Aussie Spy Agency? They used a Chinese company to install all their communications wiring! Hahaha!

Even funnier is: it's not a joke. It happened. Or very similar. I shit you not:

News 2013: SECRET and highly sensitive blueprints outlining the layout of Australia's top spy agency's new headquarters have been stolen by Chinese hackers. .. The blueprints had been taken from a contractor involved with the project.

The documents contained details of the ASIO building's floor plans, communication cabling layouts, server locations and security systems, potentially putting the entire organisation at risk.

Bloody Hell! So everything there is to know about the layout of this public-funded New Aussie Spy Org was, from the beginning, still is, in the hands of China's Spy Org. (Wonder if we have their Spy HQ blueprints, everythings ...)

Forget about the Spy-Balloons, CCP has already got the All-U-Can-Surveil deal from a much closer up perspective than that.

News 2013: The allegation comes just weeks after Canberra softened its stance towards China, claiming in May's Defence White Paper that it no longer saw the rising superpower as a threat.

Ah-ha. Only plausible reason the Aussie Defence Bureaucracy could say a rising Totalitarian Superpower is no longer a threat is if ...
Defence has been infiltrated. Defence is the threat.

Coincidentally, Xi Jinping formally ascended to the position of President in March 2013.

It comes amid deepening concern about widespread, aggressive state-sponsored hacking by China, with further allegations that its cyber spies have recently obtained sensitive Australian military secrets and foreign affairs documents.

This is the Aussie Secret-Security Brains Trust, who, while these mega-breaches were going on, issued a White Paper saying it had: softened its stance towards China (coz) it no longer saw the rising superpower as a threat. (!)

Whistleblowers reported Defence Department's classified email and restricted networks were also accessed externally. In fact:

(T)he entire amount of information stored within the Defence Restricted Network, has been leached out over a number of years.

The entire amount! Remember, this leaching was not done by any domestic Conspiracy Theorist that the secret service, by its own admission, spends most of its time/our money harassing. It was done by the CCP. The most obvious enemy by a mile. Walks in through the front door - owns the the whole layout + the entire amount of information.

Professor Des Ball: At this stage, with construction nearly completed, you have two options. One is to accept it and practise utmost sensitivity even within your own headquarters. The other, which the Americans had to do with their new embassy in Washington ... was to rip the whole insides out and to start again.

The Aussies chose Option A - accept that CCP has bugged our building & knows the layout better than we do - though they skipped the practicing of utmost sensitivity part. We'll get to that later.

The company involved in the leak hasn't been named. Why not? It's a Secret. THE Secret World of Non-Accountability ... What could go wrong there?

Notwithstanding the official cone-of-silence, AECOM, a Global architecture/engineering Org that was integrally involved in building The Great Aussie Spy HQ, is one of the chief suspects. Amongst a small field of 3: AECOM (Overseer Development Giant), FJMT (architecture, smallish), Lend Lease (Construction Giant).

Lend Lease was involved in dumping of asbestos-contaminated soil from the site, & not paying small contractors on time, sending several broke. When complaints mounted ...

ABC: In a statement the Federal Government said the managing contractor for the project Lend Lease was responsible for dealing with each of the sub-contracts.

*Lend Lease referred all enquires to the Government.

So Lend Lease is no angel Org, but i still suspect AECOM in The Great ASIO HQ Leak.

Here's my reasoning why:

AECOM was charged with ripping off Disaster Relief funds in relation to Hurricane Katrina ... in 2005 (so exposed form well before ASIO's New-Era HQ was built in 2013). If it's a poor person looting in the aftermath of a disaster to survive, they'll be front-page crucified. If it's a Big Global Org doing the same thing, but much, much worse, you'll never hear about it. Take-away: AECOM is not/never was big-on-morality. A fact which didn't bother ASIO big-brass in the slightest when they awarded them the contract. Might have been a prerequisite.

They have a Strategic Global Headquarters in Shanghai. They are one of, if not the biggest western Orgs involved in Xi Jinping's Belt & Road Initiative.

ExecutiveGov: Under the auspices of BRI, AECOM is collaborating on railway, port and marine, airport, industrial parks, buildings and urban development projects, principally in Hong Kong, Malaysia, Singapore, Sri Lanka and the Philippines

You could add Spy HQs & Australia to that list of BRI projects. When you sign up to BRI, you sign up to CCP-rule. It's set out in the contract , as we explored with Dan Andrews's sign-up - there's no grey area.

AECOM's website: Our (ASIO's HQ Developers) presence in the Greater China region spans more than 60 years and we have offices in virtually all major cities, including Beijing, Chengdu, Chongqing, Guangzhou, Hong Kong, Kaohsiung, Shanghai, Shenzhen, Taipei and Tianjin.

Kaohsiung & Taipei are not cities of CCP's China ... or Greater China (the new creepy lingo of CCP's expansionism). They're cities in Taiwan. A separate, self-ruled, democratic county. We all know that. Same as we know that China's brand of Totalitarianism, persecution of protesters, & creepy bio-metric surveillance is bad ... don't we? Whose side are you Secret Society guys on here?

Australian citizens'? Or CCP's side?

Truism: When you lie down with CCP dogs, you get up with fleas.

You don't get multi-billion dollar BRI contracts without strings attached. Don't need to be a top ASIO Spy to know that. In fact it helps if you aren't.

Media reports on the ASIO breach say the info was hacked/stolen, but a more likely scenario is the CCP simply switched-on-the-computer in the Shanghai Headquarters of AECOM & got everything they needed from the comfort of home.

To go back to ASIO's Option A (according to Prof Ball): accept it (total security penetration) and practise utmost sensitivity even within your own

headquarters

The Aussie's wanted to practice utmost sensitivity as far as possible, but it was easier/much cheaper not doing that. In the end it became an economic-rationalists no-brainer (that ended up way more expensive for normal people, as well as opening the door to yet another calamitous security breach).

Let's see what happened ...

Revision #13

Created 25 February 2023 05:23:51 by dulandrift

Updated 28 February 2023 01:30:56 by dulandrift