

Culture

Apart from clocks & calendars, there's another way to register Time/Nous/Whatever's presence:
Culture

(Author's note: When i wrote that sentence a few weeks ago (edit: 4 weeks), i already had the next 4-5 pages mapped out on Catholicism's/MSc's audacious ride to global mind-control. First page Time-travel - this one is Culture - its relationship to Time - then onto THE Church - bang bang bang - page-a-day - explore where it goes from there ... which is somewhere up the Daly River - see you in the NT...

But got stuck on one-fucking-word: Culture

It's central to the MSc story, but what is it? What does it mean? Define your terms ...

First there are different levels. You can talk about the Shin Boner Spirit culture at the North Melbourne Football Club - or a full-anthropological immersion into an indigenous buluo - you'll find a lot of difference - that difference is the beauty - but there will still be an arrangement of celebrated values & meaningful participation in both those communities that connects with its members. Culture is that connective stuff.

That's all great, but it led to thinking about Culture as a stand-alone Thing. It results in a pattern - a spectrum - a primary wave/particle influence - that all us humans experience. It's powerful as fuck ... So what is it - when it's stripped back to its core?

By the time i got through - well i didn't get through - but four weeks later i realized i had 4-5 pages about Culture - which is fascinating - but it's a different book, mate - we're doing this one - on MSc's influence on NT indigenous people - we need one page max - otherwise it will block the flow of the story. Park it.

But ...

Put it in bullet points if you have to - one page or less - on my desk by tomorrow)
