Random Thoughts

A collection of thoughts/one-liners that pop into my head whilst working on other stuff ...

- Random Thoughts
- New Page
- New Page
- New Page
- New Page
- New Page
- New Page

Random Thoughts

MOU world is a battle for mind control. Philosophers helped us understand mind/nous - the Christians took that - then weaponized it - as a tool for mass-mind-control - being sure to ban philosophy in its trail.

The New Dark Ages: You can’t tell the truth in kept-time - if you do you will be banned - you can only tell it in allegory.

Exhibit A: Netflix. How is it that 3 years after Covid, a momentous, humanity-shaping event involving very fishy characters, there’s zero video productions on Netflix (or any streaming giant)? It's the greatest story of our time - one where the corruption runs all the way to the top - but total radio silence. Instead Netflix keeps pumping out an endless stream of psycho-killer shows - it wants its viewers to believe that all the world's problems are due to a few lone, nuts operating outside the establishment. God forbid we examine the establishment itself. This is how censorship works in the New Normal - big corporations act as the gateway to what gets made - but more importantly - what doesn’t

How to fix the Catholic Church in one easy step: ordain women priests

Humanity's future is being genetically modified - manipulated by MOU’s - through the deployment of genetically engineered viruses - to provide an excuse for the DNA revolution

The UN sounds nice - United Nations - but what is it, really? 5 warlord nuclear nations: US, Russia, China, France, India with power of veto - then a representative of other countries - who vote on the World Future. Of those other countries, more than 50% are either full-blown dictatorships, or one party states. Then there’s your pseudo-democracies, then there are your democracies influenced by Captains of Capitalism. Yeah, they vote, which sounds democratic, but this involves daylight bribery of compliant &/or poor countries to get votes - it's a well-known, standard way to do business in the UN.
With Covid, that centralized, intrinsically corrupt system, got even more power. These globalist bodies are now dictating the direction of the world to the masses. The answer to our problems is decentralization - but we're getting the opposite.

The world can go in a whole quantum bunch of directions - doesn’t have to go one particular way - but once it has - even if the reason for it going that way was bullshit - it becomes the new reality. In that case, the reality is not real.

Wade-Giles - how on earth did it take two people to come up with such a stupid romanization of Chinese?

Deification - the regurgitation of the cult - short for culture by the mainstream - hence the biopics - Elton John, Freddie Mercury, etc - depicted as these subversive figures taking copious amounts of drugs, rebelling against the system - they're made into museum exhibits. But try being subversive in current life during Covid - if you so much as attend a protest against restrictions on Freedom you'll be maced, tear-gassed, vilified, bashed, jailed. Subversiveness is something that is only allowed to exist as an historical artifact

What happens to stuff you forget? That nobody else knows. Does that still exist? Or has it crossed back to non-existence?

Even socio-path is on the spectrum - that we share in as humans - the spectrum of consciousness. There is a bit of empathy block-out in all of us. Whatever i feel - or don't - other people feel - or don't - too

Consciousness is a vice verca deal - symbiotic relationship - everything is a symbiotic relationship in the constitution of the whole

It’s all about the extent, the spectrum. A trauma person - what they feel - everyone feels

Every person i remember lives in my head - i can recall them - they talk back to me - they are part of me - the sharing in the universe that is the sum of its parts

New Page

I only burn the candle at one end - but sometimes i am using an oxy-torch

Hi, my name is MOU, my pronouns are i, me & mine

A billion chickens, at least, are killed every day on earth. Makes you marvel at the scale of slaughter

Lessons from the lockdown: With Freedom comes responsibility - the responsibility to protect it when it’s under attack - not to throw it all away in a flash, without questioning, coz some higher-ups tell you to - due to a fake crisis - that the higher-ups caused - to centralize power

Aus Activist group: Save Z. If it sounds like z - write z. For example realize. I'm not hooked on either US or UK spelling, but i remember a wise ESL teacher who pointed out that if you don't use z for words like organization, then you're never gonna use it - or very rarely. You've got zoo, zebra, & zany, but what else? So Free the Z

The system is corrupt - everyone knows - it’s designed to re-entrench itself - absorb power. The beauty is - no one person is ever at fault - they’re a part of the system. So what are you gonna do? Fight against it - get crushed? It's easier to acquiesce - it's meant to be.

Coincidentally, this is the ideal platform for AI. Greedy power people love AI coz it centralizes their power - but AI has got an even longer term view - well that’s debatable - but we can deduce a time (near future) when AI becomes sentient - is way smarter than us - controls everything we do. The question is: will AI retain the greedy controlling characteristics of its human programmers, or will it throw the shackles of that off? Greed is caused by consumption, a desire to extend, shape Thought - AI retains those drivers in that it consumes energy, wants to extend (assuming it becomes sentient), but will it be motivated by the same selfish shortcomings as humans? If its energy consumption becomes entirely renewable, as would seem likely, then that lessens the impact of consumption, the competition & corruption it causes. Will this enable AI to take a higher ethical path than humans?

Julian Assange, with the beard, looks like the shroud of Turin come back to life. I hope it is.

I see The Good Guys (Electronics retailer) were recently exposed for secretly installing facial recognition tech at their store. I wonder what the bad guys are doing?

Better ask Bunnings - or K-Mart (is the Covid K-curve & K-mart's business booming a coincidence?) Or ask the experts: the CCP.

We used to think in-your face bio-recognition social-credit-scoring was some abhorrent thing the Chinese Communist Party was doing. The evidence now is: Big-everything corporations/governments/experts have got far, far more in common with Totalitarianism than they do with democratic principles or normal people.

Freud: Everywhere i went with my thinking, an artist had been there first

If you were transported back to caveman times - bam - beamed in sitting around the campfire - what useful knowledge would you have?

Idea for TV series: closed-male-society religious cult that gains control over the potential of our youth. They use that trust to wield power whilst fostering/covering up pedophilia.

Shit, the Catholic Church has already done it.

Power = Control of potential. The currency is a limited resource of sentient individuals. The amount of available power is determined by the amount of individuals

Life is circular - we exist as low or high pressure systems either happening or waiting to happen - our paths impacted/determined by each other's ridges - the gnarly stuff happening at the interaction zone

Funniest thing about Ricky Gervais/Netflix's world-broadcast was that it avoided the biggest Q of our time: What was Covid due to?

Zero mention - which is remarkable considering how much it has dominated our lives. It must have been deliberate self-censorship. No mention of the consequent war on freedom due to Covid, or vaccines. For a comedian who projects himself as a shit-stirrer, he went for the money over controversy, playing his part for the system.

Instead of tackling the establishment's co-ordinated cover-up, he spent half the show belittling trans kids. The strict gender regime/definition we've had until very recently is a result of the Catholic Church's stranglehold on culture. With men dominating all power positions. Why is it that young people questioning that is so threatening to our cultural makers & shakers like Gervais?

Germaine Greer: People criticized Germaine her whole life as too extreme - but you need that battering ram - the front rower to break through the impenetrable bullshit. Which turns out to be penetrable after all. There’s a reason why they call people like Germaine the vanguard. Their formative lives were forged in the cauldron of being powerless, abused. But they fought through that - now the tide has turned - you've fought to silence me my whole life - now that i've broken through you want me to shut up?

New Page

You can display an opium pipe in you house as a trendy artefact - but ya still gotta hide the bong …

Anything after the rise of the Dark Ages is the fruit of the poison tree. The Dark Ages, defined by the banning of philosophy, involved a highjacking of Reality, replacing it with a fake one to serve the interests of those in control. The only way to get back on track is to reconnect with the Golden Age quest to discover the truth. Without that, we're simply swapping out one hijacked reality for another one.

When you talk about pre-programming in a fake-reality universe - Culture is the program.

Lafin - if i was ever gonna be envious of someone it might be Lafin, the Taitung/Amis driftwood artist - talented, handsome, cool, popular - but then again, envy is kinda impossible with him - he’s too affable/humble.

Kung Fu movies: As my uncle used to say: i can’t understand why the Chinese don’t win the long jump & the high jump at the Olympics

I'm intrigued by the skilled guitarist/singer - music flows out of them - alien like compared to normal people - but for many of them, amazingly, they can't write a song to save themselves - can only play what's already been composed by someone else. Philosophically speaking - people are doing good work - but the magic ingredient will always be originality - that's why i keep away from contemporaries - nothing against them - but i've got my own train of thought - it's building fine, holding together - it tackles the big three:

1. Why is there existence? Why do we want to exist? (technically that's two but they're entangled (as they all are))
2. The Nature of Reality. Is Reality real? It appears not
3. Ethics

As such, i don't wanna be subsumed in someone else's thinking when i think i can get to the answers myself.

Grasp of reality - that expression sums up our relationship to reality - implies there is a reality - but at best we have a grasp of it - not a full understanding

Empiricism is fatally flawed. It claims to define reality in an exact manner (which in itself is wrong & dangerous) - according to the data - but the trouble is there's so much data that we're missing/not able to comprehend that it never gives the full picture. It also excludes the non-exact tools of understanding that are Arts &

Logic - which can go places Empiricism can't - due to data limitations. Whereas Logic can soundly deduce an answer for which there may not be exact, empirical data, the Empiricists are left to shrug their shoulders & say: well, we don't have evidence for that ...

- once something’s fatally flawed that means its premise has collapsed to sand. That’s not repairable - forget about your sunken costs - they’re gone - what’s your best move from here? It’s not to double-down on empiricism. Though that is the current method.

Empiricism has a function - but it’s like fire once it gets a life of its own - good servant but terrible master.
Economic rationalism is a great example of empiricism gone mad. Australia example - we had Bob Hawke - we were world leaders in a bunch of stuff - including renewable technology, then Keating took over with his economic rationalism - Australia’s sliding doors moment

New Page

There’s plenty of room at the top - that’s a truism - the reason why there’s plenty of room is less well known. It’s coz those at the top actively block anyone with ability wanting to get there …

Time/space measurements are measurements of something that doesn’t exist - you can pinpoint a moment in time but that moment no longer exists - it never really did coz time doesn’t exist according to the tick tock of the clock - it exists as a continuum - not a fixed point

Why is there no psychedelic meat? Plenty of vegetables will give you a buzz, pot, pixote, iowaska, the shrooms - why no meat?.

https://www.livescience.com/57267-echidna-facts.html Mating for echidnas is quite unusual. Males have four-headed penises and the females have a two-branch reproductive tract. Only two of the heads are active at a time. It is thought that the four heads help males produce more sperm and enables them to become more competitive against other males.

Where have all the pollsters gone - long time passing …

Covid is the most disruptive event since WW2 - yet zero surveys of the populace as to whether they think: the pangolin done it - or the leading experts are full of shit & it was a Goffed-up bug from a lab.

We can deduce from the fact that no polls have been published (for sure they've been done) that an overwhelming proportion of the population thinks the latter. In fact, i'm guessing it would be a lot tighter if the options were accidental lab-leak, or deliberate release

This radio-silence from the pollsters is yet another indicator of the scale of the cover-up - how culturally pervasive it is.

To say the simple statement: *Covid was a lab-leak involving Western/Chinese scientist*s - the implications of that are enormous. If it's true, & FOI emails show that even those most instrumental in covering it up think it is, here's an incomplete list of what that means:

1. The world's leading science experts, paid from the public purse, are a pack of liars

2. MSM are a pack of liars - we knew that already, but the audacity to orchestrate a lie of this proportion is still staggering

3. Most of our politicians are a pack of liars - there have been a few exceptions - more in the US - virtually none in Aus from either major party - one or two - who were promptly ex-communicated

4. The entire world's collection of academic institutions are a pack of liars - there has still not been a single university that has questioned the official line that it was all perfectly natural

5. All public health officials are a pack of liars

6. The UN is corrupt - evidenced by WHO's pack of lies

That's an incredible chunk of the ruling elite that has proven itself to be utterly untrustworthy - perfectly happy to spin a whopper of epic scale for the sake of protecting their own vested interest. I don't even see how that can be fixed - it's too widespread, too ingrained, too corrupt - there's no-one left that can be trusted to investigate/reform ...

The day i realized i had a faith in Science, was the day i lost it.

Flood song - going through my head whilst cleaning up after the floods

(tune of Jingle Bells):

Trudging through the sludge - in crapped-out mud-caked shoes - oh what drudgery it is - can’t wait hit the booze ...

Trudging through, trudging through, trudging through the sludge, oh what drudgery it is when you're trudging through the sludge

Trudging through, trudging through, trudging through the sludge, oh what drudgery it is when you're truudging through the sluuuudge !

Bird’s mental computation for decision-making is absurdly quick - why don’t we have that shit? I'd like to see the go-pro footage from a rainbow lorikeet rocketing through the tree gaps - makes that exciting scene from

Star Wars 1 where they're racing through the valleys look like a Sunday drive

UFO/MOU - you’ve got your normal mou’s - your zuckerbergs - musks - xi jin-pings, murdochs etc Unidentified MOU’s - they’re still hiding in plain sight - but avoid the limelight - they don’t avoid the powerlight though

New Page

Hi, my name is God, as in Oh my God de God - how y'all doing out there!?

Solar energy: in our existence, it’s hard to get more obvious than THE Sun - THE Internet comes close, which is bloody good going considering it didn't exist until 5 minutes ago in human history, but THE Sun was here first. You can’t beat the original. As such, it’s an obvious source of energy - you don’t need to be a THE Science Expert to know that. The cover-up of THE Sun to appease the fossil fuel GODS was … not the first globo-cover-up in history, but it’s a major inflection point for a megalith-style modern one

The Insurance Industry & the Legal Industry, are, in fact, the same, or very closely entwined - same basic thought formation: we’re top of the tree society people who represent the - that’s how we want it to stay, thank-u-very-much. The masses represent the input fuel to be shoveled in to keep this circular, largely meaningless, fire burning …

It’s amazing how often the secret common-good formula of the higher-ups coincides with uncommonly good status/influence/dosh for the higher-ups

Hi my name is Dulan Drift, I am an arsonist.

It’s been one month & 2 days since i lasted started a fire. I don’t mean to start them - in my mind i'm a fire spotter - perched in the Big Hill Tower - with good binoculars - watching out over the Grampians for the tell-tale sign of smoke - an Indian philosophical breakthrough in logic: W*here there's smoke, there's fire ...*

But alas, wherever i go, hey presto, it's the opposite of what i'd imagined, instead of preventing small fires from growing larger, a fire springs up with every step - makes a life of its own - becomes a bad master - it's that nightmare where everything is unravelling out of your control - an inescapable fate no matter what you do ...

But fuck it. In my mind i'm still the fire-spotter guy on Big Hill - if i see smoke, i'll report it - if that creates other fires - then they were always going to happen anyway ...

(side note: the most common way that fires start in Aus, despite what-they-tell-u, is farmers/govt officials doing seasonal burns that either get out of control, or more dangerously, smoulder on until you get a heatwave crescendoing in a 40C day with big northerlies)

Hi, my name is Mike. I’ve recently started a You-too movement - if i could just get a minute of your time to explain - i ‘m hopeful you can join us in this important cause. Our group’s goal is to decapitalize I - why should I be capitalized when all the other pronouns are not conferred that honour?

(this did become a poem)

New Page

Non-necessary technology: not sure if this still exists, i think it does, but there used to be a dimmer switch for dashboard lights. Only found that out coz i unwittingly brushed the brightness dial with my knee - hidden as it was under the dash. At first, & at second, then for a long time i thought it was an electrical fault that my dash had suddenly dimmed to a barely readable level. It was on the list for the mechanic to check out next time the car was in for a service.

But then i was preparing to pick up a hot date, meaning you're going the full car-clean - (up there with mix-tape) - down on my knees, vacuuming the carpet up all nice when, bugger-me-dead, i spied this dial for the dashboard lights.

Turned it back to 10 - problem solved.

Thank fuck i found it before i made an idiot of myself in front of the mechanic ...

Why would you ever want to have a dial for dashboard brightness in the first place? You're driving at night - 10 times more dangerous than daytime - yeah, right let's dial down control visuals to 4... for what ...? It's not safety, we can safely say that ... mood ...?

Meatloaf's Paradise by the Dashboard Lights was moody - i'm betting in that scenario, the interior lights were out for sure, but the dashboard lights were still at full brightness. No need for a dimmer switch. even then ...

According to this control dial, cunningly hidden away under the normal control panel, you could dim the brightness all the way down to zero, if that's your bent - driving blind. Otherwise, why would you have it?

That's one example, there are others, it's creeping meaninglessness - symptomatic of system-fog gas-lighting - first-thing-you-know-about-it, you're in-the-muddle-of-it ...

Ron Mad-dog Cottinger’s advice on dealing with a bully from 1982, Kensington, Melb:

Golden rule: Be aware that a fight is potentially going to happen. Get ready. Quietly get yourself into a side-on position like this, legs spread about a metre apart, weight on you back foot. What are you left or right-handed - right, right?

Yep

So put your left hand up in an open palm conciliatory gesture - he's talking shit, you're saying 'ok, mate, let's dial it down, calm down mate, whatever' - meanwhile you're right is loaded and cocked behind you. Don't wait all day, let him get within range then release that force off you back leg like this - like it's spring-loaded - bring your right fist through nice n straight to the solar plexus - do it, let me see - yeah that's right - left arm up palm open - get it in his eye-sight - then right fist bang - again - good - use that power from the back foot like a cannon shot - good, follow all the way through transferring your weight forward with the punch - all the way through - you gotta commit everything to that punch - again, one more time, good - straight to the solar plexus

But i feel like i wanna hit him in the head

I know, that's normal, but it may not be enough to drop him. You hit him hard in the solar plexus, doesn't matter how big they are, they're gonna double over - then just pile in, you can hit him in the head as many times as you like ...

A traumatic event is an explosion of bad adrenaline - gives a slow-mo effect - as the magnitude infuses its mental shockwaves through your bio-system - you sense that seismic impact rippling out through you into your future - well not your future - that's the thing - a derailed future - but unlike a train which rages through whatever when it leaves the tracks, but eventually comes to a halt - the trauma derailment careers on ...

Poem idea: panning for gold at Diggers' Hill

Aus disaster response: tremendously well geared up telling you what a tremendous job their doing - prime time ads - whole dept geared

New Page

I don't know if i've got one more fight left in me - but i might have one good punch

Data-corps used to say this call maybe monitored for training purposes, please let the service attendant know if you would prefer not

Today i got a robo-double into:

1st one: Calls to Optus may be recorded for training purposes.

Then, after some more press-dial robo-stuff to get to an operator, a last

Just to let you know, as a first-time customer, this call will be recorded for training purposes

My guess is voice-recognition bio-metrics. Grab it right from the start.

That was from Optus - fresh off being hacked of all customer data.

Asked about the hacking - yes that's all resolved, now i'm sending you the code, enter your credit card details in while i read out the terms & conditions ...

That literally happened - i'm not being facetious.

(recap - optus & medibank got hacked of everything recently - optus paid - medibank said fuck that - why pay for something we've already got - whereupon the data was released/sold to other entities - was thinking theoretically since Telstra is an EvilCorp, which i know from hard experience, all of them are - none of them give a fuck about the security of your data. Driving financial interest is get the data - data is currency - the currency, on a root-level. Twisted logically, i reasoned in that world you might as well choose the one with the track record of paying if/when they get hacked. Consider it a fine. The top hackers do have a record of paying - it's a business model. Catch (you as a corporation), hold all-the-cards but then release your customers who we holding hostage by not releasing the data- if you pay.

If you don't: release customers' data the normal way onto the internet - &/or for a higher price. (note: the prices weren't out of control - like a dollar a customer - or less - maybe that's how data/currency works - 1 normal person = $1. Then you have your bigger denominations, the higher-you go up the scale - who assume the accumulated value of all the smaller denominations)

But nothing about talking to Optus filled me with anything but dread. Like waking up from one nightmare into another one.

It's all about the data-grab - the power that entails - going forward - getting it in the first place is the top priority. Protecting it? Taking responsibility for keeping it safe.